They also offer a wide variety of build kits, including various Cerakote options that are available as limited runs. We're price concise and like solid quality, and Aero delivers on that. Why does it make it on my list of the best AR10s. I'm glad you asked, friend. I'm well over 500 rounds into this rifle with zero malfunctions. The new gas system is adjustable to 20 different positions as opposed to the suppressed and unsuppressed settings of the first R.E.P.R's gas block. For those of you playing along at home, that's a half MOA performance. Not only is the Repr incredibly well built, it's also crazy accurate. I highly recommend you take a look! They hold a number of military contracts, and with good reason. Their guns shoot, they shoot well, and they shoot every time. We've rung the gong at 800 meters with it. We've put half a mag in a halfinch hole at 100 yards. Never had a problem with this gun, and never expect to. All of these guns made this list because they are worth the money. While it is missing some of the improvements that modern style AR10s have, it more than makes up for that in pure cool factor. The original battledesign shines through in the remake. You won't find collapsible stocks or short barrels here. Check out the review for videos of me hitting 600 yards with ease. Sig's other AR10 is the 716G2, the main difference between the two is that the 716i is direct impingement while the 716G2 is shortstroke piston. Still, this delivers a LOT of rifle for the price. Learning how to shoot at a young age in the Boy Scouts, he now spends most of his time working on or with firearms. Be it shooting, upgrading, building, tinkering, or writing about them sharing his passion and knowledge of firearms with others is an everyday occurrence. Read more. Hows that possible Is it because they are piston action rather than direct impingement Sorry if you have already answered this The Sig Tread is one i have wanted since i spotted one in a video.

Also like the Aero and Brownells and the PSA. I already own a few PSA complete rifles and an couple of extra BCGs and other parts. The very top end of my budget is about 1300.00 so it would be the Tread or maybe i could bump it up to one of those there Retro rifles i just love how them bad boys look. But PSA makes a great product for the money and ia great selection that can be upgraded later with triggers and barrels and other parts if you really want to go that route. The most i have done to my PSAs is add a new trigger upgrade and maybe a carrying handle. iron sight. They are tough, quality made rifles and as long as you get a chrome lined heavy barrel you will be passing it down to your kids or other family member no matter how old you are. Love my build go my DOPE and calculator trued look forward to the next match and pushing out hits to 1,200 yards with 140gr ELDs. Could you describe that, and how to get one. Any reviews on that option It attaches to the bottom of the Magpul PRS stock that is being used on that rifle. Less than half the price of several of these also! Maybe or maybe not one of the best 5, but Id be happy with either. As someone else mentioned, the RRA is another Id be happy with. Not sure why. I have a P415 Edge that I would put up against any AR15 on the the market. The Revolution is simply one of the finest AR platform 7.62 rifles on the planet. The Revolution is light but I wouldn't trust one for an extended period. I know I've got a lifetime warranty with these caliber guns but a cracked bolt on a revolution or some other issue with the smaller frame might crop up after extended use. Very surprised it wasnt on this list. Have one lower and 2 uppers from them. Most accurate rifle Ive ever had in my hands, have model 70 Winchesters that cant come close. 10 rnds at 100yds and one hole that you could cover with a nickel. And yes, heavier than a feed sack. Still able to put 10 rnds size of a quarter. Great rifles, extreme quality.

1 downside, have to use either their mags or Fal mags. Never had a malfunction. Great for down on the farm. Just ordered one. Comments Ive been on a waiting list for notification when available for probably close to a year now. Theyre available Your help made up my mind for me. Im a old Veteran

Nam, I wish I had my M16 I carried. It was 1 of the good ones. Rangers lead the WAY! I can't help but buy parts when they get to stupid sale price range. Long story short only thing DPMS is the lower. I'm a fan of the Ballistic Advantage barrels and caught one super cheap. Everything else premium parts with a Larue trigger. July 4 sales are awesome every year. It's a tank but shoots fantastic. A lot of gun for a reasonable price. Off topic but DPMS has an important role. Price and reliable. Good article. I enjoyed it and you can't do a book on everyone's favorite. My vote for complete rifle would be Larue but that's some serious change. Do I own one Nope. One day maybe. Just picked up a SA Saint Victor 308. Why did I go that route I am very happy and regret free. I bought one, because it's what was available at the time. It comes with a standard AR15 length receiver extension, which means they run that ridiculously small buffer. Because I already had the parts here, I put a Vltor A5 tube on it, which let me fit a regular size AR15 carbine buffer, i.e. a heavier buffer. That helped smooth out the gun tremendously. It also comes stock with a carbine length gas system. There is no reason on gods green earth to run that short of a gas system on any AR pattern gun if barrel length permits a longer one. I've got less than 500 rounds through this and I'm already looking at buying a different barrel with a longer gas port. But other than that, I can't complain too much about this rifle. It's not like you are going to run a carbine course with it. That's not what a 7.62 NATO AR is made for To get my moneys worth for hunting boar or deer.

What length barrel would best work for me It should be coming. soon. ish. Sadly they tend to get ignored. Might have been better titled. How is lmt or kac not on this list DPMS and psa they are cheap and for many reasons. Definitely not a top 6 AR. I'd stick the Ruger SR10 in here before some of these just because it's more reliable. Especially if you compare bcg. I then bought a LUTHAR M3 stock and a Miculek Compensator. I had some YHM sites and a few other optics from a 39 to red dot. on hand. Now it is the way I like it. with a little extra furniture and it didnt kill me. Accurate enough for me. but with the compensator. I dont make friends at the range LOL. I dont intend to hunt with it, have other rifles for that. It is just something I enjoy and didnt eat a big hole in my budget at one bite. I reload so feeding it isnt much of a problem and ammo by the case isnt that cost prohibitive. I think DPMS is a good entry for those who want an AR type platform to play with. I did find one thing interesting. Randy Luth was the head of DPMS before moving onto building the stocks. Enjoy what you buy and dont second guess your choice. Study them and then pick. I'm usually into precision and have stayed away from AR's because they have not had the reputation of bolt guns with superb custom actions. For my build I elected to go with their M4 in 6.5 Creedmoor. My first group after zeroing at 350 yds was a freshly painted steel plate at 590 yds. After running a brush and tight patch through the bore and firing a fouling shot we fired two more groups. The first was a duplicate of the first and the second had a flyer that took the group to 4". This was with hand loads and 142 gr Sierra MK bullets. I guessed on the load, but believe I can shave the groups by tinkering with the load a bit more. For a semi loader this has exceeded my expectation and I may build another for my son. I can't see any reason to spend more than I did with Aero.

The bolt lugs and barrel extension are proprietary. Some parts are interchangeable with DPMS pattern rifles, but the important internal stuff that is likely to wear out or break is proprietary. That fancy aftermarket rail means they wont touch my rifle. I like the rifle, it shoots well, but I have no spare parts and cannot buy any. BSF Barrels, Hyperfire triggers, JP Enterprise and phase 5 extended bolt release. I USED A Gibbz upper. I stacked a Athlon Cronus on top I waited months to get it, but definately worth it. No complaints at all with this one. Look forward to seeing more. Its for hogs and commies. Top it with P.A. acss dmr 308 and side mount irons. Suggestions Absolutely no heat damage to the wires and the socks show no discoloration. Found a new package of two in the garage the other day and have couple AR builds in progress nearby and that occurred to me that they are just the right size to slip over AR barrel. Most of my hand guards dont have heat shields and since these things wouldnt be snug so wouldnt trap heat tight to the barrel so do you think it would be ok to try them. You can imagine how hot the headers are right out of the engine and I can touch the pipe with one of these on my finger and can feel some heat but not much. Guess Ill see if you try em. Or start marketing them and make millions. L8r I did drop in trigger upgrade on mine and made very noticeable difference. Comes in a bit heavy at over 9lbs.wait, Im tryin to write a review and I already know this stuff. One thing I dont know if yall have rated are muzzle brakes. Put one of the highest rated ones on the 716 and not sure if it helped cause I was too busy goin deaf. Damn. Ear plugs AND electronic muffs. I thot the weapon had exploded. Maybe I was too close to my Suburban and a building but unless Im up on the 50 Ill just deal with recoil. Shoulders heal, mostly, hearing dont. Thank goodness no one was with me. My thots for today. Oh yeah, rePalmetto SA.

I bought 10 or more stripped lowers b4 selection just in case and finally am gettin around to building bout 1 a month in different configurations. To match upper and lower finishes Im using Krylon Rust Tough semiflat black or semi gloss high heat engine paint. Clean with lacquer thinner or disc brake cleaner. Apply light coats and then hit it with heat gun. Hair dryer does ok. Stands up to wear and elements pretty good and easy to,touch up if shows wear or scratches. Redneck powder coating. Sorry, all my comments turn into novels. 64yrs old and got a lot to share and my time is short. Edmund Burke. I dont have a 10 yet, so. Im all ears.eyes, it is a comment section after all. After breaking it in properly I dropped in a hiperfire trigger added a Jerry michilich muzzle break, spent the time to time it how I liked, and with hand loads its a tack driver, under an inch, Federal premium match 165 grn outta the box is a close 2nd. I can accept that you can only do so many, but it's really pretty unique. Small frame and pretty good support. Mine shoots MOA and has been 100% reliable. I took my Hunter model and cut the barrel down to 16" and added a MI mlok rail, replacing the carbon fiber rail. I also replaced the Mapgul Rifle stock with an Mapgul SL buttstock and heavy buffer and added an adjustable gas block to tune to the Ammo I'm running. After adding a Vortex Viper PST 16 the gun hits the gong out to 600 yards very easily. It's lightweight and sleek and I'm surprised it didn't make the list as the next step in AR10 pattern rifles. The ar10 hasn't given me one problem at all. I absolutely LOVE it but I don't have anything to compare it to so take that as you will. Everything they make is very high quality. The only problem its not in stock. I called and got a run around when the parts will be in but they sent me a refund very quick on my request. Im in the middle of an AR308 build and am using an AERO precision upper and lower.

I managed to get each on sale from Brownells at different times for the build. A couple of parts left, including the bolt carrier group. I also have a DPMS LR308 Sporticle I bought from Walmart a few years back when they still had the AR rifles. Its pretty much a direct copy of the Oracle without a forward assist or a dust cover. It shoots great, but a replacement trigger was the first upgrade I did. I made that decision after 1 shot. Ive built a couple AR15 and AR15 pistols and am thinking about an AR10 pistol as my next project, but am going to do a lot of research on that one before I start. I have a Leopold, H.A.M.R. for my bottom scope and a Leopold red dot on top of it. Deadly combo. The action was very smooth from the box, the and worked like a fine watch. The controls were practically instinctive after a few minutes of going over it, the empty mags dropped with no problem and after some practice locating the mag well while keeping my eyes watching, i could drop the mag and, if necessary, put another mag in with ease. The AR10s recoil surprised me. Even the M14 had some recoil, but the Armalite seems to recoil more straight back than up. I can't afford any tools to do all those tedious number details and other really necessary numbers needed for precision shooting. I'm from back in the woods and learned to shoot when I was seven yrs.Not much of a review, but I wrote the rifle was reliable in all aspects I could judge and you don't feel beat up if you shoot a lot of rounds. Wish I had bought one yrs ago. Ive purchased 3 firearms from PSA. My Springfield XD Mod 2 subcompact 40 Cal. I also have two rifles. Both AR15 in.556, one with a magpul handguard, the other with a freefloat M Lok handguard. I love them. You are right, they can take a while to ship. But my last upper I purchased online late Monday night. Processed Wednesday day and I received it Thursday afternoon. Was amazing wish it was always like that.

They offer really reliable rifles for outstanding prices. Best part is everything they make they guarantee for life. If something breaks, they fix it. Even if you aren't the original owner. Now that's a company you can trust. The key is just to check their website daily. Things come in stock and don't stay long, so keep checking and when you find a great deal jump on it! For example Midwest Industries An amazing rifle that does not get the recognition that it deserves. My first custom build was purely sourced through DelTon and several ARs later I purchased a DiamondBack AR15 pistol. Another great budget AR15 not mentioned but in my opinion every bit as good as PSA and inline with their cost is BEAR CREEK Arsenal. I'll kick the idea up the chain of command and see what bossman says. Shoots like a dream You left out the 3 best. Looks like a list of your top paid advertisers. These guys say all the time they buy or borrow products they test. They don't have sponsors. This is a good list of different budget rifles. It's easy to criticize and even more difficult to come up with readable content that people don't shit on. I am considering a PSA upper for my 308 and would like to know if there are any compatibility problems between the 308s. Any advice would be appreciated. I have no personal experience with that combo, but HIGHLY recommend the PA10 using Palmettos upper and lower. Mine shoots any of the Russian steel ammo and all of the domestic stuff I have tried with not a single failure. I love shooting it each time I take it out to the range; So far I have not had a chance to take a varmint. I am a rehab left hand shooter and the rifle performs with a sling and scope. Shoot good ammo and it performs both bought or my reloads. Pat Cavanaugh Round Rock, TX I would also consider the LaRues and Barrett.
